

Cramer, Johnson, Wiggins & Associates, a Sedgwick Company, Announces New Partnerships to Assist Military Families Impacted by Earthquakes

RIDGEFIELD, Cali., July 31, 2019 – Cramer, Johnson, Wiggins & Associates (CJW) today announced that it has partnered with both Aon and Lincoln Military Housing to provide aid to and assist military families affected by the recent California earthquakes. CJW is a division of Sedgwick, a leading global provider of technology-enabled risk, benefits and integrated business solutions.

This partnership comes on the heels of the recent 6.4 and 7.1 magnitude earthquakes in California which opened fault lines and caused widespread damage, much of it at China Lake Naval Station. The damage caused by the quakes displaced many of the armed services families located on the base. Sedgwick colleagues, in conjunction with Aon’s Rapid Response Team, were on site within 48 hours to assist the client in identifying and assessing the damages and ensure the least amount of displacement to the families.

“Our top priority is to ensure that the families impacted by these earthquakes can get back to their normal lives, and with the support of Aon and Lincoln Military Housing, we’re working to do this as quickly and effectively as possible,” said Jay Voelpel, vice president of client services at Cramer, Johnson, Wiggins & Associates, a Sedgwick company. “We are working diligently to help limit loss and provide support to these families in their time of need, and we hope our aid can in some small way be a comfort to these families who sacrifice so much in their line of service.”

Sedgwick is also helping Lincoln Military Housing to help the families identify their damaged personal items. In doing so, they are working together to process claims arising out of the damage to help limit the loss.

Sedgwick, Aon and Lincoln Military Housing will continue to offer on-site and off-site support to residents and personnel that live and operate out of China Lake Naval Station.
